Superintendent of Bridges; D. A. Adams Present: Messrs. Carnahan, President, Armstrong, Atkinson, Boring, Frew, McColloch, Phillips and Schultze. The Sheriff was ordered to bring in the absent members.

The object of the meeting, as stated by the President, was for the purpose of and turned over in the ditch. The fall threw young Adams under the tank box and he was instantly killed. Holmes and Mull gottleradially scalded. The Hannibal and St. Joe east bound train passed by just before the accident occurred, and saw the Rock Island engine fall into the ditch. They stopped and ran back to their assistance. Holmes and Mull were brought to this city where their wounds were dressed and every possible attention rendered them. Hull died at eight o'clock last night and Holmes at eight o'clock this morning. The engineer and fireman escaped without injury. Holmes had been Superintendent of the bridges on the Rock Island Road for many years. He lived at Genesee, Ill., and had a wife and five children. Adams was from Altoona, Pa., and Mull from Coopertown, N. Y. The Superintendent of the Rock Island Road telegraphed instructions to have the bodies placed in metallic caskets and forwarded to their relatives. in metallic caskets and for warded to their relatives
